Garrison & French Said Shrinking

HANOI, Indochina (U.P.) — The defenses of beleaguered Dien Bien Phu shrank today to less than three-quarters of a square mile under constant Communist pressure.

The Communists were within 700 yards or less from the heart of the fortress.

The French High Command said Brig. Gen. Christian De Castries had completed a radical reorganization of his isolated garrison. Pulling his troops back from several salients, De Castries blocked a rough circle around five positions for a do-or-die stand against the Communist attack.

Within the compressed perimeter were 11,000 French Union soldiers, dependent for supplies and reinforcements entirely on parachute drops which must be carefully aimed at the center of their narrowing defense position.

Against them are pitted at least 40,000 Communist rebels, well supplied and reinforced over bombarded but still open roads leading to the Red Chinese frontier.

The French High Command said the consolidation of the French forces in the smaller defense area was carried out during a lull in today's ground fighting. But Red 150 mm mortars and 105 mm howitzers harassed the defenders as they dug into their new positions and strung new barbed wire.

With the week end abandonment of the two French northern outposts, Red gunners were looking down the throat of the garrison in its little, shell-churned valley.

The rebels held about 300 yards of the how useless 1,200 yard French airstrip. Another auxiliary airstrip to the south has been crisscrossed with Red trenches.

French officers said Communist Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap now plans to push his trenches and burrows down the airstrip from his positions in an attempt to choke off French supplies.

They said that each advance made by the Reds on the vital airstrip reduces the drop zone for parachute reinforcements.

The French said the rebels hold one-fourth of the airstrip but the Communist Indochinese radio claimed half of the runway had been seized in action that knocked out three French Union battalions.

There was a lull in the ground fighting, indicating that Giap is regrouping for the final all out attack expected this week.

But fighting raged in the Red River Delta at Hai Duong and in the Bul Chu region, the French High Command said.

Billy Kopperud Sees Meteor

Billy Kopperud, son of Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Kopperud, 800 West 1st Street, became quite excited tonight about 8:45 o'clock when he saw a meteor trailing across the sky.

Billy and the neighborhood children were out playing when he turned over on his back and saw the meteor. Before the other children could see the meteor, it was gone.

The young boy described the meteor as glowing red and about the size of a tea cup. One of the comments Billy made to his mother was "wonder if it is an invasion from Mars?"

Reports this morning said that residents in Lexington also saw the meteor.

New Reports Of Rotted Windows Are Coming In

By UNITED PRESS

New reports of mysterious windshield pittings came in today—almost as fast as theories about what causes them.

A Canadian scientist said he thought that windshields damaged in various parts of the country might have been pocked by the skeletons of tiny marine creatures literally blown sky high by recent Pacific hydrogen bomb tests.

Some scientists and many policemen said "mass hysteria."

Other scientists have already suggested dust storms, industrial ash or even smog. An atomic scientist pooh-poohed the idea that radiation from the H-bomb tests could have caused the phenomenon.

The damage began several weeks ago in Washington state where hundreds of windshields were reported pitted or cracked even when parked facing blank white walls or when carefully guarded against vandalism.

During the weekend the epidemic spread to the Atlantic Coast, although the number of complaints seemed to be smaller in areas outside Washington.

Mrs. Lawrence P. White of Dedham, Mass., said she found the first "pitted" windshield was a cobweb of fine cracks seven hours later you could still hear it cracking.

A "large number" of cars were reported damaged Monday at Eau Claire, Wis., and one of them was said to have "150 tiny pits in a window. There were reports of pitted windshields in Minneapolis, Torry, Havre, Ind., Redmond, Ore., Linsay, Ont., Edmonton, Alta., and on one car crossing the ambassador bridge from Windsor to Detroit.

Scientists at the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., and in Washington state were conducting tests on samples of damaged glass in an effort to explain the pockings.

Assessments To Be Raised Over State

FRANKFORT (U.P.) — More than half of Kentucky's 120 counties will have to raise their property assessments if one is sought, and more than half the counties in the state have not assessed property that high.

The move is one of the most sweeping steps ever taken by the state in its fight to improve property assessments.

The new tax commission policy was outlined in a memorandum from Robert H. Alphin, chairman of the tax commission to Wetherby.

"We feel that the Kentucky Tax Commission has an obligation to all citizens," Alphin said. He pointed out that assessments at present range from a low of 17 per cent in one county to a high of 57 per cent in another. He said the commission must "keep faith" with those taxpayers who are paying taxes on the higher assessments.

Alphin said the new policy was announced at this time so that individual taxpayers in counties where the assessment is below the state average will have an opportunity to bring their assessments in line with that of their neighbors.

He explained that if any person believes his property is assessed above the average for his county, he may protest before the local county board of tax supervisors, which will meet during the first week in May in each county.

Wetherby issued a statement praising the Commission's action and termed it "a fair and reasonable approach to the problem of equalization among the counties."

Wetherby said that after the increase in assessments, some counties might be in a position to lower tax rates to partially offset any increase in the assessment. "I encourage them, where possible," he added.

The Governor said: "All of us want to pay our fair share of taxes, but no more—I ask all citizens to join me in supporting the Kentucky Tax Commission to do a job so vital to all Kentuckians."

Edward Grammer To Be Hanged

BALTIMORE, Md., April 20, (U.P.) — G. Edward Grammer was sentenced today by Judge Herman M. Moser to hang during the week of June 7th for the "near perfect" murder of his wife, Dorothy May Grammer, in a fake automobile accident.

The actual day and hour of execution will be set by the warden of the Maryland Penitentiary at a later date.

Only executive clemency by Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin can save the balding 37 year old one-time New York office manager from death on the gallows. Both the Maryland Court of Appeals and the United States Supreme Court rejected Grammer's appeal for a new trial.

McKeldin said earlier that he will grant a hearing for executive clemency if one is sought, and it was regarded as virtually certain that the defense will ask for such a hearing. McKeldin was known to be opposed in principle to state executions.

Neither Grammer, dressed in a dark blue serge suit, nor his family showed the slightest emotion when the date of execution was pronounced. Grammer stood expressionless and with head bowed slightly as the death warrant was read.

His mother, Mrs. Martha Grammer, and two brothers, Harold and Kenneth, left immediately after the short proceedings ended.

Grammer was led back to the penitentiary death house where he has been held since originally sentenced to hang on April 7th of last year.

Neither Grammer was convicted of bludgeoning his attractive 33-year-old wife to death on August 19th, 1952, then placing her body in the family automobile and sending it down a hill on the outskirts of Baltimore to resemble an automobile accident.

The state charged that the motive was Grammer's "hopeless love" for Mathilda Mizibrocky, a Canadian then employed by the United Nations in New York.

Reds Will Use Atomic Energy For Peace

MOSCOW (U.P.) — A senior deputy today told the opening session of Russia's new Supreme Soviet Parliament that the Soviet Union will use atomic energy for the well-being of its people.

Among his listeners was Soviet premier Georgi Malenkov who told the last meeting of the Supreme Soviet that Russia had developed the hydrogen bomb.

Dr. Alexander Kirilenko, told the delegates assembled in the brightly lighted hall that Russia's desire is for peace and closer relations with all peoples.

But the Soviet government newspaper "Izvestia," which appeared on Moscow's streets only a short time earlier angrily accused the United States of "intervention in the hostilities in Indochina."

Observers in London believed the Izvestia article may set the tone for later speeches to the Supreme Soviet—possibly by Malenkov himself. These, they believed, would display a much less peaceful attitude.

Malenkov received a standing ovation from the 1,300 delegates as he entered the hall. He sat beneath a statue of Lenin, facing other members of Russia's highest assembly. He was flanked by the Communist Party's First Secretary Nikita Khrushchev and Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov.

Kirilenko's keynote speech was echoed later in the Soviet of the Nationalities by Latvian Delegate August Kirshenchen.

Observers were uncertain whether Malenkov would speak when policy declarations are made at the final session near the week's end.

Situation In Indochina Bad

By WILLIAM GALBRAITH
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 20, (U.P.) — Sen. Styles Bridges (R-N.H.) said today after a congressional leadership conference with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles that the situation in Indochina looks "gloomy but not hopeless."

Bridges told newsmen as he left the State Department that it was "not in the wind" now to send American forces to Indochina. But he said no one could tell what the situation will be in the distant future.

Bridges, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, was one of 15 Republican and Democratic congressional leaders who took part in a lengthy private meeting with Dulles on the Indochina situation and the forthcoming Geneva Far East conference.

Informed sources said Dulles arranged the bipartisan meeting to assure the lawmakers that there will be no "appeasement" of Red China at Geneva and that the considers it unlikely that American troops will be needed in Indochina.

"The latter part has been the subject of brisk congressional discussion since Vice President Richard M. Nixon said in an off-the-record speech last week that American G.I.s might have to fight in Indochina if the French pull out. Nixon himself stressed that he regarded this as unlikely."

Following the congressional conference, Dulles scheduled a noon meeting with diplomatic representatives of 15 nations who fought in the Korean War, and envoys of the three associated states of Indochina. The meeting was called to discuss the Geneva conference and to move forward on Dulles plan for a "united front" in Southwest Asia.

The secretary of state also planned a luncheon meeting at the State Department with Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson and Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The flurry of high level congressional, diplomatic and defense meetings cleared the way for Dulles' departure tonight for Paris where he will attend a meeting Friday of the 14-nation North Atlantic Treaty Council. The secretary and his top aides will move on to Geneva over the weekend for the difficult conference with Russian, Red China, and North Korea on Far Eastern problems.

New Method Of Transmitting Pictures Told

NEW YORK (U.P.) — A new and exclusive method of transmitting newscasts by facsimile has been introduced by the United Press and was described to U.P. executives assembled here for their annual meeting.

Mims Thomason, vice president and general manager for newscasts, said, "this is the first machine ever placed in general operation that can produce ready to use pictures for both newspapers and television stations, entirely automatically and over a network with any number of transmitting and receiving points."

So far, he said, five newspapers on the West Coast, two in the East and one in Canada. The U.P. has ordered several hundred of the machines, development of which was only recently completed, to continue its expansion of this type of service.

Thomason said facsimile transmission delivers a positive picture. No darkness is needed. The first users of the service were television stations and about 25 of them are now using facsimile photos from the U.P.

Jack Bisco, vice president and general business manager, reported that the United Press now has a record number of newspapers, radio and television stations receiving its service directly—4,000 in this country and abroad. He said the greatest growth in U.P.'s client list during the past year had been in the newspaper field where the United Press has been operating for two years. Since last April, 78 picture clients have been added.

Earl J. Johnson, vice president and general news manager, described a major innovation in U.P. service, a section of the news report devoted to dispatches which appear on the wires as "United Press extra." He said the purpose of this new department was "to stress the exclusive in reporting and writing."

The venture was conceived and set up by Harry Ferguson, executive news editor. It is in charge of Jack V. Fox, formerly London bureau manager.

Jury Out On Crash Suit In Circuit Court

Circuit Court this morning continued with the case of Robert Carson vs. the Opal Housden estate and Euel Lockhart. No witnesses were presented today.

Lawyers for the three factions, Robert Carson, Euel Lockhart, and the Opal Housden estate, were given twenty minutes each to give their pleas to the jury. By Circuit Court Judge Ira Smith.

The jury retired at 10:40 this morning to reach a verdict.

Carson is seeking over $4,000 from the Housden estate and Lockhart, and Lockhart is asking for about $2,000 from the Housden estate.

Judge Smith told the jury that they should seek to find who was guilty of negligence, or whether both were.

Wells Overbey represented Robert Carson and George Overbey represented Euel Lockhart. Nat Ryan Hughes represented the Opal Housden estate.

The jury was still out at press time today.

Carson and Lockhart gave their version of how the accident occurred. Both said that Opal Housden attempted to pass their car on the hill just north of Midway and collided with them as he attempted to get back into the line of traffic, as he met a large truck approaching him.

Dr. Lowry and Dr. Clark described the extent of the injuries of the two men, and gave a disability rating of 15 per cent and 10-12 1/2 per cent respectively for Carson.

Dr. Harold Gish testified that Lockhart suffered from a mouth injury which resulted in the nerves and bloodvessels to two teeth being cut. Two teeth "died" from these effects, he testified and two more might.

Homer Charleston testified yesterday that he was traveling behind the two cars and that they passed him immediately before the accident, one behind the other.

L. J. Hill testified that the Lockhart car was worth approximately $1,500 before the accident and $200 after the accident. The Housden car was worth approximately $1,000 before the accident and about $100 after it, he said.

Others testified yesterday afternoon were Mrs. Housden, Earl Akers, Ruth Holland, and Hunter Love. Akers was the driver of the truck into which Housden crashed. Love had taken some pictures of the accident scene.

Mrs. Holland said she crashed from her home on the Hazel highway, she said.

Local Polio Chapter Gets $5300 Check

A check for $5300 has been received from the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis to help provide care for polio patients here, it was announced yesterday by Ray Brownfield, chairman of the Callaway County Chapter of the March of Dimes organization.

"This financial help comes as part of a general National Foundation arrangement to provide needy chapters with immediate emergency aid," Brownfield said.

Brownfield explained that March of Dimes funds raised each January are shared with national headquarters. The chapter spends its portion for patient care and national headquarters finances research, epidemic services, professional education and emergency aid to chapters. This year, national headquarters added another program, Polio Prevention, which consists of increased supplies of gamma globulin and studies of a trivalent vaccine against polio.

"We have in Calloway County," Brownfield said, "a good example of how the local chapter and national headquarters work together to fight infantile paralysis. If we run in the red, the National Foundation will pull us out." (Previous to the current advance this chapter has been advanced $10,000.)

Brownfield said it is quite possible the local chapter may require even further aid from national headquarters.

The local chapter at present is providing funds, in whole or in part, for the care of 15 patients stricken last year, in addition to 4 who contracted polio in previous years.

Weight Class For Colored People Held

The first session of the weight control class for the colored people met last night at the Health Center. Records of weights and measurements were made and ideal weights were recommended to each individual from the Metropolitan Height, Weight tables.

Reasons for trying to regain normal weight were discussed by the group. Calories and where they come from was the main theme of the talk by Miss Marjorie Murphy, nutritionist. Special emphasis was given to the importance of milk in protecting the active body tissue and bones of the reducer. A simple method of mixing powdered milk was demonstrated and everyone tasted Mocha Milk prepared with soluble coffee, reconstituted skins milk and sucral. The first assignment given the group was to drink a quart of milk each day.

A film, "Something You Didn't Eat" was shown to illustrate what happens if essential food nutrients are lacking. The group will meet again at 7 p.m., May 3.

U S Can Deliver Atomic Attack

MACON, Ga. (U.P.) — Gen. Nathan F. Twining said the Air Force can deliver an immediate counter attack upon Moscow "with or without atomic and other new bombs" with its long range bombers.

The Air Force chief of staff told the Macon Chamber of Commerce Monday night the long range bomber makes the interior of Russia vulnerable "regardless of the types of bombs or weapons that might be carried."

The United Nations Disarmament Commission is currently discussing a possible prohibition of nuclear weapons. Twining said it is the bomber, not the type of weapon, that would make such counterattack possible.

He emphasized that although plans for the "new look" Air Force involve "super weapons of great power" all the planes will be able to carry "more conventional bombs."

THE SPORTS PATROL

By STEVE SNIDER
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Sports of all sorts:

Ball players never miss an opportunity to need the bass about money and returning. G. I. Don Newcombe of the Dodgers already is pitching for his 1955 contract.

At a Knot Hole Gang dinner attended by club president Walter O'Malley, Newcombe stood in front of a microphone answering questions.

Including this one from the floor: "I guess those Dodgers pay checks look better than those you got from the Army the last two years, don't they?"

"Yeah," responded New; with a significant glance toward O'Malley "but not much."

Baseball got off to a good start weather-wise, but Commissioner Ford Frick warns there's plenty of rain and cold weather still to come this spring.

"All you have to do is look at the record," said Frick. "There are from 50 to 60 postponements every year during the first 30 days of the season. Once, I believe, there was a game called at Cleveland because of snow—late in May."

Want to get in the swim? Atlantic City's press bureau reports entry blanks are available for the world championship ship marathon swim coming up July 28. There are $10,500 in prizes at stake and the guys and gals who compete will have to swim only 26 miles.

A few stock car race drivers are using a new gimmick. Three in the field at Hillsboro, N.C., Easter Sunday employed two-way radios in their cars to maintain contact with their pit crews.

Roy Campanella of the Dodgers probably set some sort of record by clouting two home runs on the first three pitches to him in the opener but it's also true that any player who belts even one homer in the first three games will be ahead of Babe Ruth's record pace when he hit 60 in 1927. The Babe hit his first one that year in the fourth game off Howard Ehmke of the Athletics.

J. Fred Muggs Has Changed Very Little

By JACK GAVER
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP)—Fourteen months of fame haven't changed J. Fred Muggs much. He's just as big a chimp as he ever was.

Slightly bigger, maybe. Even a midge chimp grows a little each year despite the wearing cares of public life and the weighty problems connected with being animal editor for NBC's "Today" television program five mornings a week.

The famous little ape had two candles on a birthday cake on this morning's show. His owners, Buddy Mennella and Roy Waldron, have settled on April 14, 1952 as his birth date in the jungles of the Cameroons, Africa.

"Muggs now weighs about 22 pounds," Buddy said. "He's off a little because he recently was out for two weeks with a respiratory illness. That's the thing we always have to guard against with him. We practically have to screen the kids who come into our pet shop in Glen Rock, N.J., so he doesn't come into contact with anyone who has a cold. The doctors gave him all the latest pills and injections and brought him around."

Muggs started his TV career by accident in February, 1953 when Dave Garroway and the other people connected with "Today" were thinking about adding some sort of animal to the cast. Muggs and his handlers just chanced into the right office at the right time.

J. Fred has learned quite a bit in the past year. He's much more friendly—especially with children, which is supposed to be a rare thing in chimps.

A guest on this morning's show was 11 year old Lon Pardee of Glen Rock who gave J. Fred the latter part of his name. Mennella and Waldron originally brought the chimp as sort of advertisement for their pet shop and conducted a local contest to get the infant a name. Pardee won with "Mr. Muggs."

Mystery Farm Number Fourteen

Last week's mystery farm was the farm of Robert Young, located on Murray Route Two, on the Paducah Highway. Young is presently the Tax Commissioner of the county.

Mrs. R. E. Kelley called in to identify the farm, followed by Loretta Culver, Mrs. Charles Buey, Jackie Cooper, Mrs. Macon Rickman, and Anton Herndon.

A stream runs through the farm to provide water for the cattle. Robert purchased the farm in 1951 from Mr. Ed Bilbey. The residence is about the same but a chicken house has been built and some sheds and silos. Some fencing has also been done.

Mrs. Young is the former Miss Janie Wilson. They married in 1935, and have four children, Robert Jr., Bill, Jane Marie, and Burton Ray.

The family attends the First Methodist Church. Robert is a member of the Masons, W.O.W., and the American Legion. His main other interest than farming is sports of any kind. He has been a coach for one of the Little League teams for several years. Both Robert Jr. and Bill play.

In addition to the cattle and small grains, the 4-H projects of the children are carried on also. These are primarily calves and chickens.

Robert was elected Tax Commissioner last year, and now holds the office.

The farm presents a pleasing view in the Spring and Summer as it is on a straight stretch of highway, and spreads out to the East in flat to gently rolling acres.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

MRS. SERENA ADAMS dumped the basin of suds in the sink, removed a little mirror from a chair where it had been propped, and polished its surface with her elbow before she hung it again on the kitchen wall.

"Now," she said, "you look like somebody."

In his wheel chair Mike Adams grunted, rubbing his hand over his shaved cheeks. "Dang near peeled me! You let me do it myself and my skin wouldn't burn for a week."

"Your hands shake and you let your beard grow too long. After this I'm going to shave you every day. Now you sit still till I fetch you a clean shirt. She's not going to see you looking like a tramp."

"Sit still, she says! You ask me, she's lucky she can see me at all," he retorted, "acting the fool like she did."

"Listen now—" the old lady's voice rose—"you're not going to throw it up to her, not one time. You let me hear you even creep it and you can sit in that chair till you rot and I wouldn't even fetch you a drink of water."

"You'd do it, too," he growled. "How you ever going to know why she did it if you don't ask her?"

"We ain't going to know because she don't know herself."

"She wrote it down, didn't she? It was in the paper."

"How do we know she wrote it? There was plenty around that place that was jealous of Farrie. They thought Albright favored her and likely he did. But she earned it, all these years, taking a lot of him, looking after those young ones of his, doing things a wife would have done for him if he'd had one. Anybody could have written that piece on the typewriter. It didn't have any name signed to it."

He wriggled in the chair as she jerked the shirt around him. "You got my arm twisted. Lemme do it myself."

"I don't reckon there's any use trying to get a necktie on you," she sighed.

"What for? What you want to duxie me all up for? I ain't going any place."

"That nurse is coming with her. I wish he wasn't sending a nurse along. I can do for her just as good as anybody and it's just one more for me to wait on."

"You mean that one that was here? Young feller. Had that girl with him?"

"Marshall, his name is. The girl was one of the Tabers from down Harpeth way. Old Mort Ravel's daughter married a Taber. You remember Mort?"

"Yeah, I recall him. He had this same thing I've got. Used to see a chauffeur lift him out of his car every time he came down to the courthouse."

Serena was all primed and ready to go to the doctor's.

Farrie came in, looking a little better. "He isn't going to pay her. Nor the hospital. I'm going to pay him back every cent if it takes me the rest of my life," croaked Farrie grimly.

"It was his idea. You earned it, I'd say, 40 times over. He'll talk you out of that idea as soon as you get back to the office."

"I'm not going back to Sewell Albright's office."

"What do you mean? The doctor told me that excepting for your voice you'd be all right in a couple of weeks."

"I'm not going back to work for Sewell again, ever." A hard, bright look came into Farrie's eyes. "I couldn't! Why, I'd burn with mortification every minute. I'd be tormented, wondering what he was thinking about me—knowing what he was thinking! That I was a fool who had so little sense that I'd given myself away. Nothing embarrasses a man so much as the woman who throws herself at him—and I made it public."

There came a day when Farrie walked out to the living-room, a trifle pale, uncertain on her feet, and prone to clutch at the backs of chairs and smile at her own weakness. A day or two later there was a yell from Mike. "Big car stopping outside."

Serena snatched off her apron, ran to the front door and peered through the dusty curtains. "It's him. It's Albright. There's a Negro boy helping him down. Farrie, you go lie down quick. I'll get your blue silk bed jacket."

Farrie's face stiffened a little and her eyes took on a quickly controlled panic, but she shook her head. "No. I'll stay right here."

Sewell looked older, slumped, made round-shouldered by the crutches. He panted a little and wiped his face as the boy arranged the crutches beside his chair.

"Well, Rhody!" he said breathlessly. "Here we are, both of us on foot again. How are you, Mike? Look as if I've joined your lodge. Think I'll get a wagon like that and make 'em shove me around."

"It ain't fun," protested Mike Adams. "Too many places I want to go and can't. You get anchored in one of these here kiddy-cars and they can just shove you off in a corner and forget you."

"My lands, Mr. Albright, we take care of Mike like he was an infant baby!"

"You take good care of Rhody here too," Sewell smiled at her. "I need her back again. I'm as helpless as a man with his right arm cut off, without Rhody. How's the old throat?"

She pressed her hands around her neck and shook her head, trying to smile thinly, trying to keep back tears, while the spasmodic pain tore at her. No words would come, not even the rasping whist per.
